6. Acquired specific skills

Professional skills	C1 Adequate use of key concepts and core issues in the field of Interpreting Theory. An appropriate applying of metalinguistic discourse to the field in the A, B, C languages, as well as to the afferent professional and cultural settings, towards an optimal assessment of linguistic proficiency and of the degree of cultural adaptation of the oral message to the specialised contexts of the various targetted fields, problem-diagnosis and problem-solving. C2 Employing specific methods of consecutive and simultaneous interpretation coupled with the adept technologies underlying the process (e.g. the use of digital resources, of multilingual electronic platforms) with a view to achieving the rendition of speeches in the specialised targeted fields (e.g. politics, law, economics, technology, cultural, medical et al); C3 Acquiring a nuanced comprehension and assessment of the advantages and limitations of the various strategies and professional communication modes at work characteristic of the textual typologies of the A, B, and C languages. C4 Practising self-evaluation as a tool in adopting an optimal communicative behaviour. C5 Assessing various strategies of adapting the interpreting strategies to the specifics of the interpretive act and building towards a set of sound evaluation and self-evaluation criteria. C6 Optimising the interpretation techniques and strategies drawing on the critical acquisition and efficient application of the theoretical models subjected to analysis.
Transversal skills	CT1 The optimal management of professional tasks and their rigorous, responsible completion on deadline. The acquisition of and abiding by the code of ethics and ethical code of conduct in force in the field. CT2 The integration of teamwork techniques with a view to developing empathetic, interpersonal, communicative, resource-saving capacities as well as the capacity to undertake group-leading roles. CT3 The identification and application of efficient learning methods and techniques. Raising the degree of awareness of the extrinsic and intrinsic motivation underlying lifelong learning and the importance of expanding the linguistic area of expertise (adding languages) in order to meet the increaingly higher demands of the market.

7. Course objectives (derived from the acquired specific skills)

7.1 General objective of course	The content of the Theory of Interpreting course is designed in keeping with similar course degree syllabi at work in European Higher Education institutions and abides by the AILEA (International Applied Modern Languages Association) Charta. The subject is destined to ensure the correct acquisition and application of the core principles of linguistic and cultural mediation with emphasis on building fundamental discursive skills across the specter of the working languages and the appropriate use of professional communication registers and tenors.
